You must practice regularly if you want to become a good musician. Find a good, safe place where you can keep your instrument and music folder when you are not using it. In addition, take care of your instrument, and do not let anyone else handle it.

Try to practice at the same time every day, and do not forget to bring your instrument back to school for band class and/or lessons. Use this log sheet to record the amount of time you practice each day. You may have an instructor that would like to look at your practice log every week and collect it at the end of each term. If you practice a bit every day, you will become a better player on your instrument. Most of all, enjoy what you do — Enjoy Making Music!
